imported, and although not as great in number as the years following, still the number of head of cattle imported that year surpassed previous years by a large margin. The value of the cattle brought through from Mexico in this year amounted to $1,482,129.75. The year previous to that the importations in the cattle industry totaled $2,292,000, which amounted to $1,096,124.25.
El Paso's cattle importations for the year surpass those of any other port in the United States in the same industry and in 1910 the number of cattle brought into the United States from Mexico made up 38 percent of the total cattle importations into the United States during the year.

NATIONS IS PIONEER IN CATTLE BUSINESS

sonally owned and carried horse, "Gitch," has a history in that section of the cow country as well known as that of Mr. Nations's father. The Nations range extended into La Vaca (the cow) country and also in Gonzales country and for 50 cents a day Joe Nations and "Gitch" rode herd from there to the Gulf coast at the mouth of the Guadalupe river.

Small Bunch of Yearlings.

Starting with a rope and a branding iron at 18, young Nations soon had a small bunch of yearlings which he had traded for much as a boy trades for marbles. "I also branded a few may-ericks," he admits, with a grin behind the gray mustache. Yearlings sold then for six bits, $1 or $1.50 at the most. Joe got the yearlings and the other boys got the little money which they were paid for riding range. He kept his yearlings and the boys spent their money. That is why these same boys are riding a range today and Nations has his half-circle N brand chasing itself over three big ranches on the cattle of the Nations ranches. His first herd was bought for $2 per head, calves not counted and 150 yearlings were the decorative brand of J. H. N. from that teetually, outside it is plain to hide-ousness, but inside gorgeous in the extreme. It was left to his brother, as the bearer of the name Colonna, prince Marcantonio leaving no sons.

Is Linked With Medieval Rome.
The history of the Colonna palace is the history of medieval and renaissance Rome and that it has been made hereditary, and therefore inalienable to the house of Colonna, should be a cause of rejoicing to those who love the history of their country.
After the fall of the temporal power, in 1870, the Vatican nobles felt strong-ly, and each made some visible protest, each in his own way. It had been the habit of the pontiff to occasionally honor his great nobles by a visit, and in the imposing throne room of the Colonna palace stood a gold and red brocade chair in which only his holiness ever sat. When the pontiff be-came a "prisoner" and his visits ceased, this chair was turned towards the wall, and from that day to this, 42 years, it has never been moved; there it stands, and there it will stand until, probably, in a dim future, it falls to pieces.

Lancelotti's Pledge.

Prince Lancelotti, another "black" noble, declared upon his word of honor that he would never enter a Roman theater while the city belonged to the House of Savoy. When Maso's "Cavalleria" was first given the prince, who loved music passionately, was hor-ribly tempted to break his vow, but he would not, and went instead all the way to Vienna, heard it once, and re-turned. He also permanently closed half of the great door of his palace—with the Romans a sign of mourning—and only opened it just in these days because of domestic festivals.

The Colonna are one of these aristocratic families who seem to be torn be-tween an ancient loyalty to the papacy and a stirring of the blood due to new conditions and fresh points of view, which take them into the apostate camp, that of the royal house. The prince just dead showed this uncer-tainty to a very marked degree. As a young man he clung to the pope, but as he grew towards middle age he thought that to cling to the Vatican meant to be outside every forward movement of his country, and he ac-cepted the position of gentleman in waiting to the then reigning queen Margherita. In his later years he fell heir to the hereditary position of "as-sistant to the papal throne," threw up his post at court and assumed the position waiting for him at the Vatican.

One of his brothers, don Prospero Colonna, has been mayor of Rome, the other, don Fabrizio, is a senator of the kingdom, and although he has inher-ited the "assistantship," has passed it on to his son, who for his part has never appeared at court and has all his interests at the Vatican.

The late prince had no sons, but of his two daughters one married prince Teano, a Radical deputy, and the other prince Ghigo, of the blackest Vatican nobility.

Prince Colonna's death has made more of a stir in Italy than any other non-political event in many years.

they have all the conveniences at hand.
The entire house is grouped about the patio; on all four sides are doors, which lead into all of the rooms. The walk around the patio is seven feet wide and is under the roof proper and laid with the regular promenade tile. The central part is to be occupied by the garden and fountain and is open overhead.

The residence will be heated with hot air from a furnace in the base-ment. The basement was blasted from solid rock and contains two large rooms. The ceilings are 12 feet high. The residence will cost Mr. Newman approximately $100,000, and will be com-pleted in about four weeks. The car-penters are now at work putting on the inside finish. The Perry-Kirkpat-rick company has the contract and has done all the work with their own crews.
